Growing the Profession for Now and Later : Pharmacy Precepting

Schools and colleges of pharmacy depend on practicing pharmacists to provide “real world” experiences to students. Join us for a session detailing the importance of becoming preceptors – the cornerstone of experiential education -- in order to cultivate pharmacists for the further development of the pharmacy profession for the present and the future. We will outline the roles and responsibilities of preceptors and discuss potential barriers and benefits.

Speaker Panel: Kelly Masters, PharmD, BCPS, Bernard J. Dunn School of Pharmacy, Shenandoah University; Pat Resto, RPh, Walgreens Pharmacy; Chuck Price, RPh, TigRx Pharmacy; Kelly Rea, PharmD, Buford Road Pharmacy
Experiential Education Coordinators: Tonya Buchanan, Wanda Coffey, Phylliss Moret, Pat Richards-Spruill,

Learning Objectives for Pharmacists

1. Forecast the future of pharmacy practice.
2. Summarize the role and responsibilities of the schools in preparing student pharmacists for practice in the future.
3. Describe recent pharmacists’ assessments of how their experiential rotations prepared them for practice.
4. Summarize how to work with students to ensure meaningful “real life” experiences.
5. Identify what’s needed to get started as an affiliate faculty/preceptor.
6. Describe the benefits of being an affiliate faculty/preceptor and why pharmacists are motivated to serve.
